Feline Post-Surgical Instructions

www.mnsnap.org | office@mnsnap.org | 612-720-8236

Your cat or kitten will need special care during recovery from surgery. Please keep your cat in a warm, quiet and safe place indoors tonight, away from other pets, children, and the activities of the household. Please keep your cat away from stairs until fully awake. Be sure your cat has easy access to a litter box. Watch your cat carefully to detect any problems.

Restrict your cat's activity for 7 days following surgery. Discourage running, jumping, climbing, and chasing toys. Excessive activity can lead to swelling around the incision, fluid accumulation under the incision, or the incision opening up. These conditions may or may not require additional surgery at your expense.

Tonight, you may offer your cat small amount of food and water, and a litter box. Do not be alarmed if your cat has little or no appetite. Remember, your cat just had surgery! Your cat's appetite should return to normal tomorrow.

Some cats take longer to recover than others due to age, weight, or metabolism. Your cat may be groggy for the rest of the evening, but should be acting normally tomorrow. Call the Blue Sky veterinarian at the number listed below if your cat doesn't seem normal after 24-36 hours.

Monitor your cat's incision daily. A small amount of swelling, dried blood, or bruising around the incision may be normal the first few days following surgery. Keep in mind that green tattoo ink has been placed in or near the female's incision to indicate that spay surgery has been performed. If you are seeing signs of excessive swelling, redness, or discharge around the incision, or if your cat seems unresponsive or painful, please contact the Blue Sky veterinarian at 612-759-0880. She will evaluate your cat's condition over the phone and will refer you to a veterinarian for follow-up care if needed. If you choose to seek emergency veterinary care without consulting with the Blue Sky veterinarian, all charges associated with that visit will be at your personal expense. Remember, excessive activity can lead to swelling around the incision, fluid accumulation under the incision, or the incision opening up. If your cat's over-activity or excessive licking results in the aforementioned complications, any further treatments or medications will be your responsibility.

NOTE: Some cats and kittens will develop a firm, non-painful lump under the incision. This is an inflammatory reaction to the suture material (stitches) and should resolve within 2-3 weeks.

Sutures: DO DO NOT need to be removed in 10 days.

Pain medication details: Your cat received a one-time dose of meloxicam 41 mg prior to discharge. This pain/anti-inflammatory medication is effective for at least 24 hours, and can last several days in some cats.

PLEASE DO NOT GIVE ANY ADDITIONAL MEDICATION TO YOUR CAT.
SOME MEDICATIONS ARE DANGEROUS OR FATAL TO CATS.

IF YOU FEEL YOUR CAT IS PAINFUL OR IF YOU HAVE QUESTIONS, PLEASE CALL THE
